Aerial theatrics by Heather Hammond

Heather Hammond premieres a graceful low-flying aerial dance piece suspended from the rafters in the upper Eglinton station leading to the bus terminal.

Heather Hammond is an independent aerialist, dancer, choreographer, teacher and rehearsal director. Her work combines the groundedness and power of modern dance with the excitement and beauty of aerial acrobatics. A graduate of the School of Toronto Dance Theatre, Heather has worked closely with Marlee Cargill and has toured to Japan and throughout North America with High Strung aerial dance. "Intelligent and graceful" - Toronto Star.
